David,

Please see response from Trevor below; is that right? I understand we get quite a few public enquiries but I never thought that not answering was an option...

we get about ten of these a day and dont respond to any of them. I recommend a nil response to this one.

Here's another one for your action, similar to what we received yesterday.

Tks.

The sea lice situation is clearly out of control. The evidence seems pretty solid. We already lost the East Coast fishery due to incompetence and greed. No where on Tv have I seen anybody wanting to eat farm salmon. If we lose the wild salmon to sea lice we will lose one of our biggest tourist attractions, westcoast foods, and effect many species in the pacific. Why not do a comprehensive test of all the fish farms now and shut down all that have a sea lice issue. So it costs 10 million a little less than 10 billion plus. I hope you guys sleep at night knowing you could be contributing to one of the greatest catastrophe on the west coast.
